o GAP represented an administrative officer in the Office of Institutional Integrity who was placed on special leave and removed from the World Bank after an anonymous email was sent to the IDB executive director for Japan. GAP challenged the Bank's decision to fire our client for providing information to Fox News about conflicts between former Bank President Paul Wolfowitz and the Bank's Board of Directors. Our client's termination followed 25 years of service at the Bank with a discipline-free employment record. As a direct result of our work, the World Bank Administrative Tribunal released a far-reaching decision that gives Bank employees significant new protections from both excessive punishment for revealing

The Government Accountability Project (GAP) is a 34-year-old non-profit public interest group that promotes government and corporate accountability by advancing occupational free speech, defending whistleblowers, and empowering citizen activists. We pursue this mission through our public health & safety, international reform, national security, environmental oversight, corporate accountability and whistleblower protection activities. GAP is the nation's leading whistleblower protection organization.

focus has been on "hot spots" from which GAP received multiple whistleblower disclosures or where we believe there is a systemic food integrity concern. Our first investigation was launched and focused on Hyrum, Utah where we investigated humane handling and food safety disclosures at the JBS slaughter facility -- the world's largest beef processor and distributor of beef animal protein.

o As a result of our JBS investigation mentioned above, we represented two USDA employees and several local union officials who were being forced to relocate after they blew the whistle on inhumane handling at JBS. They were suspected of passing along a photo of a cow pinned underneath a gate at the Hyrum slaughterhouse, which their FSIS supervisor and JBS management instructed they destroy. The photo was leaked to a national union leader who then referenced it in congressional testimony. GAP drafted a letter to FSIS management in defense of the Hyrum whistleblowers. As a result of our efforts, USDA has agreed to indefinitely stay the relocation of the workers and a senior USDA administrator has offered to meet with us regarding this and other whistleblower issues.

o GAP represented a food safety whistleblower who was terminated from his job working in a Publix Markets warehouse after he raised concerns that consumers were being exposed to a toxic chemical that was being used on the outside of milk containers, and after he raised a number of workplace safety concerns. His concerns about consumer safety provide GAP with its first opportunity to litigate under the whistleblower provision of the Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act (CPSIA), which GAP helped create. GAP fully briefed this issue before the Department of Labor's Administrative Review Board (ARB). GAP also represented our client for his workplace safety complaint under the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSH Act).

o Despite legal setbacks, issues related to medical devices have remained as prevalent as ever, with media reports still questioning the safety of both heart valve and hip replacement devices that were marketed without the benefit of FDA clinical trials. GAP addressed these problems and more by offering legal assistance to medical device whistleblowers, educating consumers, encouraging greater accountability and oversight over the device industry, and advocating for medical device reform. GAP also signed on to critical coalition letters calling on the FDA to: (i.) improve the standards of the premarket notification process (also known as the 510(k) process) for the review of medical devices; and (ii.) ensure changes that would greatly strengthen existing safeguards to protect the public from products with questionable benefits or unproven safety.

information to the press, and sweeping searches of their computers.

o GAP released two reports about racial discrimination at the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB), respectively. At the World Bank GAP found that the Bank failed to meet its own rhetoric about inclusion and equity in hiring, retention and promotion practices. After that report was released IDB whistleblowers told us that racial discrimination was a problem at their institution as well. As a result of these efforts, GAP was a founding member of an international alliance working with the IDB's Diversity Adviser and the Diversity Office to address both of these shortcomings.

o GAP worked with a whistleblower to expose corruption in the World Bank's National AIDS Control Project II. Our client's documentation leaves no doubt that substandard HIV test kits that sometimes give false negative results distributed by Monozyme, Ltd. were in use in India as recently as 2007. Moreover, our client believes that millions of dollars in Bank funds have been spent on these kits. The continued use of the kits is a potential public health disaster, condemning many Indians to a life and death of AIDS. Our client's disclosures are of an urgent nature and reveal the ways in which a lack of accountability in Bank project operations can actually become a matter of life and death.

o GAP pressed the U.S. mission to the United Nations to advocate for the appointment of a qualified director to lead the organization's Investigations Division.

o GAP met with key staffers in the House Appropriations Committee (Subcommittee on State, Foreign Operations and Related Programs) and the House Financial Services Committee to discuss our concerns about the treatment of whistleblowers at the Multilateral Development Banks and climate change preparedness initiative at two national conferences held in Washington, DC, by the National Council on Science and the Environment and the Center for Science in the Public Interest. Additionally, we established cooperative links with other organizations substantially furthering our work -- including, for example, the Presidential Climate Action Project, the Clean Air-Cool Planet/Climate Policy Center, and the Union of Concerned Scientists.

o In 2010, we worked hard to highlight the critical need for the National Climate Change Assessment (NCCA) process to be reactivated, updated and expanded. We were an invited participant to a White House-sponsored first-stage strategic planning meeting held in Chicago to potentially reactivate the NCCA -- an important effort to assess the potential consequences of climate variability and change for the United States, which was initially praised by the National Academy of Sciences and then suppressed under the Bush Administration.

o In 2010, we regularly shared our expertise on the necessity for ensuring climate science integrity through a widely recognized website which continues to attract a growing audience of thousands of readers that includes reporters, government officials, Congressional offices, scientists, educators, activists, and others nationwide and internationally. The demand has been so high for our expertise that we expanded the site this year to most effectively convey the breadth of our efforts. We published new material regularly, and added over 250 new items. Joined by occasional guest contributors, we published many original articles on the Obama Administration, Congress, climate change planning and preparedness, the U.S. Climate Change Science Program, scientific integrity and the federal government, and whistleblower protection, with a strong emphasis on the war on climate science and climate scientists that was aggressively escalated in 2010 by the global warming disinformation campaign.

Corporate Accountability

o The U. S. Congress enacted several new corporate whistleblower reforms. GAP played a significant role throughout the process for each bill passed. They now cover employees blowing the whistle on various corrupt practices in the following segments:

- Corporations and their subsidiaries that trade on American stock exchanges (40 million employees);
- Defense contractors (over one million employees);
- Manufacturers and retailers of 14,000 products regulated by the Consumer Product Safety Comm. (5 million employees estimated);
- Companies, state and local government agencies and any institution receiving federal economic stimulus grants (several million employees);
- Hospital and health clinic workers nationwide (an estimated 5 million employees);
- Companies that contract with the Department of Energy or the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (a few hundred thousand employees);
- Private ground transportation companies (an estimated one million employees);

- Food producers and transporters for products regulated by the Food and Drug Administration (approximately 80% of food items in commerce) (a few million employees).

o In 2010, GAP's book, The Corporate Whistleblower's Survival Guide: A Handbook for Committing the Truth, was officially sent to the prestigious press of Berrett-Koehler for publication. It received critical acclaim, including from the prominent Library Journal.
